Munro's voice is big, it's warm. It's engaging and pitch perfect. But it's not just Munro's voice. It's her energy. She exudes such a musical joy that you begin to wonder just how enraptured an artist can be. And then she goes all tender on you and suddenly you're wrapped in a sound-comfort that can only be from a mother's heart. This is more than being groovy. This is art.

Now add a voice that you haven't ever heard before. One that is vulnerable but not weak. Couple that voice with guitar playing that, while slightly understated, is powerful. That voice and guitar work is subtly added to this groovy mix by Scott Patrick, a veteran musician with all the deft moves of the guitar master that he is. Munro and Patrick as a duo is an uncommon musically creative package that you might find in big centers like Montreal and Toronto and rightly so, here they were in downtown Saskatoon.

We Happily booked Munro & Patrick, Jack Semple and Chris Henderson at the EA Rawlinson Centre for the Arts on October 24, 2020. What a gift of music, positivity, talent, and storytelling our audience got to enjoy! Aside from the obvious and amazing talent, this group of artists is also committed to advocating for our astounding entertainment industry and other artists. The audience left that night with smiles, spirits lifted, and grateful for the excellent show these artists provided. Many thanks to them!

"Give Me Your Rain" is the title track from Munro Patricks' first studio album. The acoustic, dynamic, and driving roots blues melody, (featuring very tasty slide guitar), combined with gritty and heart wrenching vocals, take this song to another level. At times tender and intimate, and in the next breath, overflowing with rock influenced soul. The raw and honest lyrics are the backbone to the song and evoke a longing to be woken and live free. Blues and Roots Radio, The Sound Cafe

I absolutely loved hearing them in Salmon Arm! Hoping to hear them again. If I Happen to see them doing an event close by, I will definitely go and see them!!
